PREFACE

In view of the necessity for conserving paper, it has been found impracticable to re-print the A.P. 87 in its entirety. An abridged edition based on War Conditions ruling at this date has, therefore, been prepared for circulation to those personnel on whom the duties of cooking for the R.A.F. fall.

The object of this abridged edition is to provide a series of notes on the subject of the preparation and cooking of food. It explains what raw materials of the meals are, how they are prepared for cooking and the various processes of cooking. The quantities given in all recipes are based on requirements per hundred men and in the case of rationed commodities and the ration allowance as at this date.

Any subsequent alterations in National Food Regulations applicable to the Service will necessitate amendments being made, and it is the responsibility of the personnel concerned to see that these amendments are duly carried out as and when necessary.

STOCK POT

A stock pot should be used in all cookhouses. Usually a large boiler is provided for this purpose.

An stock is the basis of most soups and gravies, it is important that the making of it should be thoroughly understood.

Stock is an infusion, obtained by simmering bones and certain vegetables in water, to extract their nutrient and flavour.

The method of preparation is based upon the solvent action of water, and the application of moist and moderate heat.

Vegetables may be used, such as carrots, onions and turnips, but should never be left in the stock after an infusion has taken place; neglect of this will lead to fermentation and the spoiling of the stock.

Proportion for making or starting a stock pot:

2 quarts of water to every 2 lbs. of bones, one carrot, onion and turnip to every 2 lbs. of bones, salt.

Method.—Remove fat from bones, and saw into 4-inch lengths. Put the bones in the stock pot with cold water and salt, $\frac{1}{2}$ pint vinegar to 10 gallons water. Bring slowly to the boil and remove all scum as it rises. Wipe the sides of the stock pot, add 3 pints cold water and re-boil. Remove any further scum and allow to simmer for 8 hours. Wash, peel and scrape the vegetables, place on one side. Remove fat and place carefully in a basin. Strain the stock, re-boil and use as required.

(i) Scum clarified as 3rd class fat.

(ii) Fat skimming must be kept and clarified for second-grade dripping.

(iii) Stock remaining after the day's work must be re-boiled.

(iv) Vegetables which have been cooled in stock may be used for garnishing soups, etc.

TREATMENT OF RABBITS

1. Carefully skin the rabbits (if frozen defrost) and leave them in salt and water for 30 minutes. Divide into joints and re-wash in a fresh supply of salt and water and dry them.

2. The heads, necks and livers should be removed and put into a separate cooking vessel with seasoning to supply stock or gravy.

3. It is necessary that these instructions should be carefully followed before rabbits are cooked.

4. There is an absence of fat in rabbits and it is necessary either to dredge in flour, fry in fat, add bacon or stew in onion stock with flour thickening.

5. If cooked in water without the usual condiments and seasoning the dish will be insipid and probably wasted.

BRINE TUB—METHOD OF SALTING

Brine Mixture

8–10 Gallons of Water. 8 ozs. Saltpetre.
14 lbs. Common Salt.

The tub should be of wood and free from all metal fittings. The brine tub is especially useful during the summer months as a means of varying the Airmen's diet. It enables preserved salt beef to be served for dinner meals occasionally, instead of the usual roasts or steaks. Clean and preferably boiled water should be used in the preparation of the brine. Add the salt, dissolve the saltpetre in a little warm water and add to the other ingredients. Saltpetre is added to give the meat an attractive pink colour, but excess of saltpetre will harden the meat. The brine should be allowed to stand for a short while to mature.

To test the strength of the brine, place in a raw cold potato or egg. If either floats, the brine is ready for use. If not, add more salt until either just floats. Brine can be used over and over again provided it is boiled and the coagulated meat substance removed by straining. When the meat is taken from the brine tub salt is also extracted, therefore more salt must be added and the brine tested before each period of use. The brine should be kept in a clean container in a cool place where air is free to circulate as the exclusion of air is an important aspect of preservation. A wooden skewer should be used to keep the meat below the surface. Joints should be turned daily.

The salting of beef can be hastened by using a special pickling syringe. Fill the syringe with the ordinary brine and insert the needle into the joint. Finally forcing the liquid into the beef. The syringe needle must be kept scrupulously clean to avoid contamination.

Meat for Salting.—Before placing the meat in the brine, it should be placed in cold running water for approximately 15 minutes to remove surface organisms. This will also tend to open the sectors of the flesh thus making it more receptive to the penetration of the brine. No amount of salting will make bad meat sound. If scrubbing slightly tainted meat with a weak solution of vinegar and water does not remove the unpleasant odour, it should not be placed in the brine. Tainted meat will sour the brine and affect any other meat that happens to be in it.

Cooking and Pressing of Salt Beef

After removing the salted joints from the brine tub, wash well in clean cold water. Place in a vessel with sufficient cold water, bring to the boil and allow to simmer till done (allowing 20 minutes to each pound). Next, remove the cooked beef from the liquor, and carefully remove any bones, and arrange the beef in the press. Screw down, not too tightly at first, but after a period of approximately one hour, screw down firmly. Allow to stand for not less than 12 hours. The pressed beef can then be removed and is ready for carving.

Meat presses are issued to most Units. Failing such a press, an improvised method can be adopted with the aid of a baking dish and cutting board, a weight being placed over the latter when the meat is in the dish. Briskets and Silversides are the best joints for salting. The appearance of the finished joint may be improved by a coating of glazed stock gelatine and a little cochinchin can be used when meat glaze is not available.

Quater Pastry Using Yeast

10 lbs. Flour (National Wheatmeal or White may be used).
 2½ lbs. Dripping or Margarine. 3 oes. Yeast.
 1 oz. Salt. 2½ Pints Warm Water.
